

Getting the Most out of Your Major

Elaine Regelson
Colorado State University

Both students and faculty can have tremendous influence in how much students enjoy their major, and even whether they continue to study it. This BoF will explore concrete, practical things that students and faculty can do to help students thrive in their major, and to prepare students for the career of their choice after college. Possible discussion topics might include:

- How to make sure it is the right major
- Finding and building a supportive community
- Positive interactions
- Connecting with faculty
- Ways to "customize" your program to be the best for you.
